Esta es una copia digital de un libro que, durante generaciones, se ha conservado en las estanterías de una biblioteca, hasta que Google ha decidido escanearlo como parte de un proyecto que pretende que sea posible descubrir en línea libros de todo el mundo.

Ha sobrevivido tantos años como para que los derechos de autor hayan expirado y el libro pase a ser de dominio público. El que un libro sea de dominio público significa que nunca ha estado protegido por derechos de autor, o bien que el período legal de estos derechos ya ha expirado. Es posible que una misma obra sea de dominio público en unos países y, sin embargo, no lo sea en otros. Los libros de dominio público son nuestras puertas hacia el pasado, suponen un patrimonio histórico, cultural y de conocimientos que, a menudo, resulta difícil de descubrir.

Todas las anotaciones, marcas y otras señales en los márgenes que estén presentes en el volumen original aparecerán también en este archivo como testimonio del largo viaje que el libro ha recorrido desde el editor hasta la biblioteca y, finalmente, hasta usted.

Normas de uso

Google se enorgullece de poder colaborar con distintas bibliotecas para digitalizar los materiales de dominio público a fin de hacerlos accesibles a todo el mundo. Los libros de dominio público son patrimonio de todos, nosotros somos sus humildes guardianes. No obstante, se trata de un trabajo caro. Por este motivo, y para poder ofrecer este recurso, hemos tomado medidas para evitar que se produzca un abuso por parte de terceros con fines comerciales, y hemos incluido restricciones técnicas sobre las solicitudes automatizadas.

PREFACE.

H E R E A S about the Beginning of this Seffion of the College, a Paper was printed and published by One who pretends to be a Student, or to have been one lately in this University, without signing his true Name, charging Professor Hutcheston with teaching many dangerous Errors, by which some weak People are prejudiced against him and the University. We who have also been his Scholars for feweral Years, thought ourfelves obliged in Gharity to any good People, who may be impoled upon by the Author's Pretences of Zeal for Religion, to represent to the World what Mr. Hutcheson really taught on these Heads, by which the Fallbood, Ignorance, and unchristian Malice of that Author will appear to all honess Man; and they will at the same Time know what to think of the Honessy, Knowledge, Learning and Chriflianity of his Abstrors, let them be in what Stations they please. As we hear that some in better Stations knew of his Design, perused his Paper in Manuscript, encouraged the Design privately, fon the printed printed Paper to their Correspondents at a Distance, with their Recommendation; nay, could not conceal, from good Women they wisited, their Hopes, before it was printed, of the Hurt would soon be done to Mr. Hutcheson's Character.

W E cannot allow our felves to imagine, that any Member of the Faculty could be capable of fuch Malice and Stupidity; or be fo gro/ly ignorant of the Scriptures, as to relifh fuch a Paper. But good People, to whom this Paper kas been recommended, will from what follows, know how to judge of its Author and his Abettors.

IN the first Place, every good Christian would have followed the plaim Rule of, First speaking privately to a Brother who offended him; Matth. xviii. 15, 16. This was never done, but the Charge blazed abroad at once, at that Time when it could most have hart Mr. Hutcheson, if he could have been hurt by such an Adversary.

A G A I N, all who know any Thing of the University, know there are proper Superiors, to whom regular Application should have been made, upon the Misdemeanour of any Member: Particularly, the Dean of Faculty, as to Matters of Faith. No such regular Step was taken. The Design was to give a Stab in the dark, and to vent Malice and Calumny with Impunity, and this Design premeditated a long Time. But this will better appear by the whole Strain of the Paper; which we shall take notice of, by setting what Mr. Hutcheson really taught over agains each Proposition of our Author's, with a few Notes on them; by which any One may judge both of his Malice, Disingenuity, and ignorant Abuse of the boly Scriptures to ferve his base Purpose.

WE difregard the general Cant in the Preface. Let the World judge whether it was the Spirit of Truth, Charity and Love; or the Father of Lies and Hypocrify (our Author's charitable Words) who infpired him. All Sides can charge their Adversaries in Scripture Language, if they are profame enough to apply these Writings to their malicious Purpose, with any Crimes, Herely, Deism and all. The Devil can employ Fools in doing Michief; this fometimes needs neither Learning nor Ability, tho' it may require confiderable Abilities to do any important Good. We leave it to all who have heard Mr. Hutchefon's Lectures, to judge whether he is any confederate with Deifts, or any Way ferves their Caule. We know very well that ignorant malicious Zealots have done done as much Hurt to the Christian Religion, as any Enemies fecret or open, by dreffing it up in such a Manner, as every Man of Underflanding must despise it. This is to be seen in Popery, and others still retain many of the most odious Parts of Popery: A blind Bigotry, an implicite Faith without impartial Inquiry, and Rage against all who differ from them, with a Spirit of Persecution. But it is below Christians to render Railing for Railing, tho' it be wented in Scripture Language with great Professions of Piety. With what Sincerity or Piety our Author could hope God would bles such Scherows fo directly contrary to the Gospel, and the Method prescribed by it, upon any Offence taken, let himself account.

PROPOSITION I.

" W E could have the Knowledge of Moral Good " and Evil, altho' we knew nothing of the " Being of God."

REMARK.

HE speaks here indefinitely, as if Mr. HUTCHESON had taught, That we could have Notions of all Sorts of Moral Good without any Knowledge of God: And then calls it blasphemous, to say, God acts from Love of himself; tho presently we will find, in his Paper, That He did all Things for himself, and his own Glory.

PROP. II.

" TENDENCY to promote the Happiness of others is the "Standard of Moral Goodness."

REMARKS.

TO prove this to be Mr. HUTCHESON'S Tenet, you cite two Pallages from his Books, nothing to the Purpole; and fome Pallages from the Confession and the Scriptures, not opposite to this Tenet, even as you express it: Only afferting, That the Law of God is the Rule, or chief Rule of our Actions; or, That Sin is a Trangression of his Law; which Mr. HUTCHESON never denied.

NEXT follow fine Reafons, to fhew, That the Moral Goodnefs of God is different from Benignity; otherways, his Moral Goodnefs commenced only at the Creation, and he was void of it from Eternity, even unto a Period at an infinite Diffance: I fuppofe you mean, from the Commencement of Eternity, for otherways the Creation was not at any Diffance from Eternity, or any Part of it, fince it is fuppofed to have no Parts. Now, Is not a firm, conftant Purpofe in the Divine Mind, from all Eternity, to create a World, an equal Evidence of eternal Goodnefs, as the prefent Exiftence is a Proof of prefe. J Goodnefs ? (7)

Mr. HUTCHESON's Propositions.

PROPOSITION L

E may approve or condemn fome Sorts of Virtues and Vices, even tho' we had not known GoD, or had any Perfuafion, that, by his Laws, he required the one, and prohibited the other : We fhould, for Inftance, approve humane, friendly, grateful Actions toward our Fellows, and condemn the contrary; the very Epicureans did fo, who believed no Providence or Laws of God.

AGAIN, we have a Notion of Moral Goodneis, prior, in the Order of Knowledge, to any Notion of the Will or Law of God; altho' the Moral Perfections of God are prior, in Nature, to all our Faculties.

PROP. II.

DENEVOLENT Affections toward others are our primary Notion of Moral Goodness, or the primary Object of our Approbation. But, as there are different Sorts of benevolent Affections, fo there are different Degrees of Moral Goodnels: We count God morally Good, on this Account, that we juftly conclude, he has effential Dispositions to communicate Happiness and Perfection to his Creatures with most perfect Wisdom, and raifed above all mean Views, opposite to it : That we must have another Notion of moral Goodness, prior to any Relation to Law, or Will, or even to effential Rectitude, or Conformity to Divine Perfection : Otherways, when we fay, God's Lows are good, we make no valuable Encomium on them; and only fay, God's Laws are conformable to his Laws, or, his Will is conformable to his Will. He would not then command Actions, because they are good ; or, prohibite them, because they are evil. So, when we say God is morally good, or, excellent, we would only mean, he is conformable to himfelt; which would be no Praise, unless he were previously known to be good.

The Author's Propositions, &c.

His Notion of Moral Goodnels is Poffellion of Bleffednels and Perfection. Is Bleffednels Happinels of any Kind, or is it only Happinels of a moral Kind? Then Moral Goodnels is defined by Moral Happinels, (no clearer than the Thing defined) and Perfection: Is this any natural Perfection, fuch as Eternity, Omniprefence, Simplicity? the Poffellion of these imports no Moral Goodnels. "Tis then the Poffellion of moral Perfection or moral Goodnels; i. e. the Definition of moral Goodnels is moral Perfection. Again the fame is defined by the fame, and nothing clearer. The contemplating his Nature with Delight argues no Moral Goodnels, unless the Qualities contemplated be previously known to be good, and this Goodnels is explain'd by loving Goodnels.

PROP. III.

" SELFMURDER is in some Cases lawful.

R M A R K S. THE Impertinence of the Scripture Proofs here is amazing; as if Mr. HUTCHESON had taught that Men might kill themselves when they pleased, under any Evil, even while they had further Prospects of doing good in Life, and express Commands of God to endure these Afflictions, with Promifes of his Support, and the Affiftance of his Spirit. Whereas Mr. HUTCHESON ever taught that in these Cases all Suicide was unlawful. When he mentioned the Excuses, alledged by fome for the Heathens, as They had no other Guide but the Light of Nature, and were left to judge by the Probabilities they had, without any special Promises of Support, or revealed Commands to endure these Afflictions; he only did, as in other controverted Cafes, candidly reprefent what is faid on both Sides. But we affert, He never approved of any, even, the most celebrated Instances of Suicide among them, which Christians have fince looked on as the most excutable: For Example, he condemned those of Lucretia, Cato, and Brutus. He shewed, that Atticus would have acted a far more virtuous and glorious Part, by continuing in-Life, and giving an Example to all about him of Fortitude, Patience, and Refignation to the Divine Will; and, as he did not, was fo far deficient in Virtue.

As for the imaginary Cafe mentioned by this Author, in which, he fays, Mr. HUTCHESON thinks Suicide highly laudable

Mr. Hutcheson's Propositions.

MR. HUTCHESON ever maintains, That the Obfervation of the Divine Laws tends to the greateft Good of Mankind; tho' 'tis difingenoufly alledged, that he fpeaks only of Tendency to external Good. He ever fpeaks of it as an impofible Suppolition, contradictory in Terms, That any Sin or Violation of God's Law can tend to the abfolute Good of Mankind; tho' he teaches, with all Moralifts antient and modern. That many of the ordinary Precepts admit of Exceptions, in Cafes of fingular Neceffity.

THE Author's Representations of this Doctrine flew, either grois Difingenuity, or Ignorance. None ever taught, That Neceffity made Sin, or the breaking of God's Laws lawful.

PROP. III.

A S Mr. HUTCHESON'S Doctrine on this Point is fufficiently plain, from what we have faid in the Animadverfions on this Proposition in the Author; we have only to observe here, that Mr. HUTCHESON'S grand Aim, in his Explications of the 5th Chapter of Puffendorf, where this Queffion occurs, was to impire into his Scholars a noble Contempt of Danger, and a generous Readine's to expose our Lives, were it to the most certain Death, whenever the Caufe of our Coun<sub>T</sub> try, or the Good of Mankind requir'd it.

HE told us, at great length, the plaufible Arguments of a great Number of Writers, in Defence of the Doctrine and Practice of many Ancients: And the Arguments on the other Side, in the molt plaufible Cafes. But we never heard him decide, as our Author alledges.

laudable; he has grofly confounded and mifreprefented it with his ufual Calumny and Abfurdity. Mr. HUTCHESON is fo far from the Opinion he is here charged with, That he reprefented the Want of Refolution to fland all Tortures for fo noble a Caufe, as a Weaknefs of Mind, and a Want of a fufficient Force of Virtue. He always fpoke of those, who had rather chosen to undergo the fevereff Torments in fuch a Cafe, as Heroes worthy of the highest Admiration, and Applause.

NEVER did any Man of Gravity fay Selfmurder was lawful in any Cafe. But our Author knew this was an odious Word, always importing Guilt. He taught it lawful to kill Men in a juft War. Our Author might as juftly have charged him with teaching the Lawfulnefs of Murther. But he knew the Word Selfmurther was fit to raife a Popular Odium and Clamour.

PROP. IV,

" 'Is fometimes lawful to make a Lie.

REMARKS.

MR. HUTCHESON never fpoke fuch Words, or any equivalent to them. Lying is a Word always importing a Crime. He might as juffly have charged him with teaching Murder and Theft. The Scriptures are as wifely cited, as if One heaped together all the Texts againft Murder and Theft, and all the iolemn Commands to the Hebrews, in Deuteronomy, to observe the Laws of God; and thence concluded that all our Divines, Moralifts and Criticks, were guilty of groß Herefy and Deifm, for faying, "That a Man perifinng " by Hunger, when he could not, by any Intreaty or Offers " of Service, get Food to preferve Life by Confent of One " who had fuperfluous Stores, might juffly take fecretly, or " by Force, what might preferve Life : " and " that in an " overloaded Boar, its lawful to caft Lots who fhould be " thrown over : " and " that it was lawful in David to take " the flew Bread."

OUR Author is fuch a deep Moralist and Casuift, that he ventures like an Hero to encounter the whole World in denying that the Fraud or unjust Violence of the Party is a just Exception against a Contract, especially if confirmed by Oath. "He mainthe tains the Validity and Obligation of the Contract obtained "thro"

PROP. IV.

MR. HUTCHBOON ever taught, That the Law of Veracity was as facred a Precept of the Law of Nature, as, Thou fhalt not kill: Thou fhalt not fleal. Tho'he has also told us, Almost all Writers on Morals plead, that all these Laws are understood to admit Exceptions, in Cases of great Extremity; but ftill without deciding this Debate.

NOTHING can be a more malicious Calumny, than the Aspersion on Mr. HUTCHESON in this Place. Whoever understands any Thing of the Business of a Professor of Moral Philofophy, must know, he is obliged, in all controverted Points, to represent what is faid on both Sides, in a fair and just Light. The Author could not but know this; and was guilty of base Difingenuity, to represent, as a Man's own Opinion, what he delivered in that Manner. We aflert, He never taught, as his own Sentiments, any of the Arguments he mentioned on this Head, for fubmitting Veracity to the Public Good in Cafes of urgent Neceffity : But, on the Contrary, confuted, at great length, the loofe Tenets of Barbyrac, as well as Puffendorf, in Opposition to what he is here charged with. He dwelt long, and warmly on the high Importance of inculcating, in the strongest Manner, into the Minds of Youth. an universal Regard to Veracity and Sincerity, in all Cafes. He conftantly taught, That the Heart has the fame ultimate Feeling of the native Beauty and Loveline's of Vetacity and Sincerity, as of any of the other Virtues.

MR. HUTCHESON teaches, with all Moralifts and Civilians, That the Fraud or unjust Force of one Party in a Contract, makes void the Obligation of the other, even tho' it had been confirmed by an Oath given during the Error' occasioned by the Fraud, or during the Terror occasioned by the 12

" thro' Fraud by the Gibeonites, because confirmed by Oath," tho' the Matter of it was contrary to an express Command of God, to cut off that People. Oaths are, it feems, eafy Engines of eluding God's Laws, when we please ; easier than Mr. HUTCHESON'S Cafes of great Necessity. He proves this first by the Judgment of the Princes of Ifrael, the very Judgment in Question, whether just or not; and then by a Proof which no Man of common Senfe could use; the Punishment inflicted on Saul's Sons, for their Father's Breach of this Covenant : whence he proves it obligatory. Did not our deep Author know, that all Writers fay, it became obligatory by the fubfequent Ratification, after the Fraud was known to'the Ifraelites, and not in Virtue of what was obtained by Fraud? The Difficulty however is not at all removed, as he might fee, if he looked into any good Writer on this Cafe. He has Learning enough to affert frongly against his Adversary, which is enough for a Man of Zeal.

PROP. V.

" Is ridiculous to fpeak of the Sinfulnefs of Cards and " Dice, or any fuch Diversion in which Lottery " is practifed.

REMARK.

H E proves this to be falfe, becaufe we find Lots folemnly used in Scripture on a grand Occasion. So was Bread and Wine, and he should thence inferit to be unlawful to use them on any other Occasion.

PROP. VI.

" "I s wrong to fay, God always acts for his own Glory, or that we ought to have that End always in view.

REMARKS.

HE hath fubjoined here Heaps of Texts, without any Explication of their Meaning; Whether God's fole and ultimate End in all his Actions, is promoting his effortial Glory, or his declarative? or, Whether we should, in each Action, aim at promoting the Effential, or the Declarative? Whether the unjuift Force: But limited this to fuch avowed unjuft Force as is used by Pyrates and Robbers, fo as not to extend to the Force used in Publick Solemn Wars, upon specious Allegations of Right. He told, what seemed to him the Opinion not only of Cicero, but of Puffendorf and Barbeyrac, That, as Pyrates, Robbers, and manifest Tyrants had renounced a Social Life, and all the Laws of Nature, we were free from all Bonds toward them in the Use of Speech; and might use Forms of Swearing, without Intention of performing. This last Article he directly opposed, every Time he mentioned it; and used this very Expression, That to die, rather than use the Name of God with Intention to violate the Oath, would be as much Martyrdom, as dying rather than renounce Christianity. The Author's Charge here is directly falfe Calumny; and yet, on this Occasion too, he can cite the Holy Scriptures.

PROP. V.

MR. HUTCHESON faid Words to this Effect often, particularly in his warm Exhortations to his Scholars to abitain from any Diversions which might too much waste their Time by their being agreeable: And when he was shewing the Sin of hazarding our Fortunes, without an important Cause, or of being covetous to obtain the Wealth of others by Gaming. Let the World judge of the Wildom of the Charge here brought.

PROP. VI.

MR. HUTCHESON never taught these Words. But at great Length shewed the Ambiguity of the Expression, and explain'd in what Sense God might be said to act for his own Glory, and in what Sense Men should act for it.

H E never arrogated to himfelf fome Criticifins the Author refers to. If he had had as much Inclination to reading, as he had to vent his good Nature in Print, he might have found these Criticifins in known approved Authors. This was a fine Topick however for a popular Clamour.

PROP.

t4 The Author's Propolitions, &c.

Whether promoting the Declarative means any Thing elfe, than making the Perfections of God known to Men? which must flow from Gratitude and Love to God, and Goodwill to them, and natively tend to their Increase in Virtue and Perfection.

PROP. VII.

"THERE is a Superiority of Moral Good in the World.

THE following Reasoning of the Author leads the Reader to conceive, that Mr. HUTCHESON faid there was a Superiority of Moral Good among the Adult of Mankind in this Earth.

A wicked Man is capable of doing good Attions. This is faid here indefinitely, without any of the ufual Diffunctions of Material and Formal, Natural and Spiritual. And then Heaps of Citations from the Contestion and Scriptures about fpiritual Good, and about the Actions of profligate Perfons.

The Number of the Saved is greater than that of the Damned, becaufe all who die in Infancy are faved: And then by an Heap of Scriptures, fome of them very impertinently uled, he infinuates as if Mr. HUTCHESON denied original Sin.

The Light of Nature fufficient to Salvation. This confuted too by many Texts of Scripture, proving that no Man can observe the whole Law fully, and that all Salvation must be thro' Christ: None of those Points did ever Mr. HUTCHESON deny.

PROP. VIII.

" T is not probable that the fame Bodies that are laid in the "Grave, fhall be raifed again at the Refurrection.

REMARK.

THEN are fubjoined fuch Reasoning and Texts, as if Mr. HUTCHESON had denied that any of that Matter laid in the Grave, should be raised again: And this with great Offentations of Wisdom and Piety.

PROP

Mr. Hutcheson's Propositions.

PROP. VII.

MR. HUTCHESON taught that in the whole of a good God's Works, or the Universe in all its Duration, there must be a great Superiority of Good : He never confined this Affertion to the Adult of Mankind.

H E maintained, as every Moralist in teaching the Law of Nature must, that many Actions of Heathens were morally good.

In anfwering Bayle's Manichean Objections againft the Goodnefs of God, from the vaft Superiority of the Number of the Damned to that of the Saved, he denied that any could prove the Fact to be fo, and that from a probable Judgment that all the Children of the Heathens are not damned. This is called prying into the Counfels of God, but to damn them all, is modeft Humility, and no Prying at all, it feems.

HE never faid there was any Salvation to any of fallen Mankind, except by the Merits of Chrift, but often faid, he faw no Proof, that none could reap the Benefit of his Merits, but those who actually knew him; Nor do we see it yet, either from the Scriptures cited by this Author, or the Confession

PROP. VIII.

MR. HUTCHESON teaches, That the fame Body shall rife again; but, to Samenefs of Body, he does not make it necessifary, that all the fame Particles should be raifed, without any Addition or Deduction; otherways our Bodies would not be the fame from Morning to Night. One must have been very keen to find Heresy, who looked for it here. The Author fays as much himself on this Head.

PROP. IX.

"THE Divine Right of Dominion over the Creatures is "not properly founded upon Creation, nor upon abfolute Dependence, nor upon Benefits received.

REMARKS.

HERE follow Heaps of Scriptures, as if Mr. Hur-CHESON had faid, that from Creation, or Benefits conferr'd, we were under no Obligations of Duty or Gratitude, or had no Motives to Obedience; which is a bafe Mifreprefentation.

AND then because he argued upon the bare Supposition of two opposite Principles, there follows a filly Confutation of the Supposition, as if Mr. HUTCHESON had believed it fact, or thought it a possible or probable Scheme.

PROP. X.

"SIN is not aggravated by the infinite Majefty of God a-"gainft whom it is committed." And "'tis a dif-"putable Point, whether the Punifhments of the Wicked are "eternal. No Man can be faid properly to fin againft God." And the Author heartily wifhes these Opinions were true, if his Bible would let him, and then such Heaps of Texts and Reasonings as on former Articles.

PROP.

PROP. IX.

R. HUTCHESON taught, That, from the Moral Pérfections of God, we could deduce his Right of Governing his Creatures, in the most proper Manner: Tho', at the fame Time, he ever fubjoined, that Creation and Benefits were strong Motives to Gratitude and Love; and, that this Question was only a speculative Nicety, fince all that ever was alledged, as a Foundation of Dominion, by any one, was found in the only True God. This Tenet is taught by many zealous Calvinist, in their Systems, It must therefore be an higher, or a very different Sort of Zeal, which could find Herefy in it.

PROP.X

THE Charge againft Mr. HUTCHESON is here directly false and calumnious, in these three Points and some more, in this Article. He argued directly, That Crimes, or-Sins, are aggravated by the Dignity of the Object against whom they are committed: He taught this in Print. He expressive the result of the the second second second gen and some others, to vindicate the Goodness of God, seemed to look for an universal Restoration of all; yet the express Words of Scripture would allow no Christian to make that Defence. He offered several Reasons in Defence of Eternal Punishments.

HE ever faid, That Men could fin againft God, as well as Men; tho' they could not hurt him. Indeed he often faid, He knew not how any actual Quality of a finite Being could be called infinite; that Hatred of God muft be the higheft Guilt poffible; but, to call all Sin infinitely evil, when the Guilt of one Sin may furpals another fo exceedingly, muft be a very diffutable Expression, as it supposes one Infinite much greater than another, in the very Respect in which the other is infinite.

PROP. XI.

"THE Government of the Church belongs to the Civil "Magistrate." Here he subjoins, as if Mr. HUTCHESON afferted, that all the Powers in the Church of Preaching, Administrating the Sacraments, Rebuking, Cenfuring, were derived from the Magistrate, with groß Disingenuity: So he charges him with teaching, That all Heresses in Opinion, should pass without any Censure. That Subscribing a Confesion should be banished out of the Church. To this are subscribing a Confesion Mr. HUTCHESON'S Name, some Reasonings the Author has made for him, that he might have an Opportunity for the good-natured Charge of Perjury on him, and many Ministers of the Church, who, he says, are preaching against the Confession.

E must also observe what follows upon these Propositions, A Charge of perverting Texts of Scripture, in which the Author both fhews his Malice and Ignorance. Any Man who will look into Pool's Synopfis, a Book to which any Scholar can have Accefs, will find that, Prov. xvi. 4. is interpreted by many great Men, as Mr. HUTCHESON does. God fitted each Thing for itfelf, or its own Busines; Our Author has made indeed a new Interpretation of his own in Mr. HUTCHEson's Name, different from all those in the Criticks. So Rom. xii. 11. That Reading is known to all Men of Letters to be common in the Greek Manuscripts, and was followed by many Fathers, as well as feveral modern Criticks, among the Calvinists too; and yet this Author ignorantly or maliciously ascribes this to Mr. HUTCHESON as a Perversion, who told us of it without efpoufing it.

MR. HUTCHESON faid that the Rule used by some, as a great leading Maxim, We muss not do evil, that good may come of it, was not taught by the Apostles as a Rule, nor could be of any Service to decide any debated Point in Morals. For often for a good End, we may do what would have been criminal without a View to such an End, as in Amputations, hazarding

PROP. XI

MR. HUTCHESON maintains, that there are Powers of a religious Kind belonging to every Minister, and even some to every Christian, not derived from the Magifirate: But that it belongs to the Magissfrate to take Care of the religious Notions of the People, to appoint proper Teachers, and to support them. This Scheme he seemed to approve most, when mentioning two other different ones, One of the Papists, the Other of Independents; we cannot directly charge him with it, let it be good or bad. He also pleaded for universal Toleration by the State, toward all peaceable Subjects of whatever Religion, Let the Church censure their Opinions as it pleases: And shewed how this is reconcileable with the Magistrate's Care of Religion.

zarding Life in War, delivering Money to a Robber to fave our Lives, or putting Men to Death for Defence of our Country. In other Cafes there are fome Evils we fhould not do, even to obtain these Ends, such as Blasphemy, Perjury, Abjuring the Faith. Now this Rule does not tell us what we are to do for a good End, and what not.

MR. HUTCHESON never faid that the Rule, I Cor. x. 31. was to be reftricted only to the Cafe of Eating or not eating Meats offered to Idols, or prohibited among the Jews. So all his fine Triumphs are loft.

As our Author takes upon him to direct and admonish others, we shall only fuggess to him and all our Fellow-students, to examine Matters well, before they charge Men in Print with Herefies, to confult Men of more Wildom, Learning and Experience than themselves, and to follow the charitable Precepts of the Gofpel. If he was inftigated or patronized by Men of any Character or Station, let them confider what a fine Example is fer. Other Students may fall a writing and printing against themselves or their Favourites, in Church or in Colleges; and how can they complain, if others follow the Example set before them. What the Effects of such Paper-war may be, 'tis easy to forefee. Mr. HutHUTCHTSON is almost a Stranger in this Country, they thought fewer perhaps would expouse his Quarrel. Eut the fame Practice may be turned against any Man, and confidering our prefent Animosties about religious Matters, no Man is fafe from fuch infidious Attacks upon his Character; and enew will be found ready to receive Afpersions against any of the opposite Party: And with what Face can the Eeginners of such Attacks complain of them ?

WE have only to add further, that we had never thought of writing against this Author, had it not been at the Defire of fome good Men, who informed us a few Days ago, that they were afraid, the Mask of Piety he has put on, and the Aflurance with which he vents his Falfhoods, might influence fome who were Strangers to Mr. HUTCHESON and HIM.

As to the Truth of the whole of this Account of what Mr. HUTCHESON teaches, we appeal to all his Scholars in general, many of whom are now Men of the beft Characters in all Ranks of Life: And in particular, we take the Libery to mention the Names of a few who are neareft at Hand, and may immediately vouch for us to any who inquire at them.
